

In the quiet corners of my heart,
Where your name once softly played,
I find echoes of dreams, now falling apart,
In shadows where love once stayed.
Your eyes, once mirrors of light,
Now turn away in shadowed dismay,
The warmth of your smile, once so bright,
Dimmed by the words we couldn't say.
I stand alone on this path we paved,
Your footsteps faded into the sea,
The hopes we cherished, silently waved,
Goodbye to what we used to be.
Yet in this silence, where we part,
A lesson in love's bittersweet art,
For in every ending, life's canvas anew,
Paints a future beyond the blue.