

Ladies and gentlemen,

Today, we face the reality that our funding request was not approved. While this news is certainly disappointing, it is far from the end of our journey.

We've built something incredible together, and this moment does not diminish the passion and dedication that define our team. Remember, every challenge is an opportunity in disguise. This setback reminds us of our creativity and resilience--the qualities that led us here in the first place.

Let us harness this motivation to refine our vision, optimize our strategies, and explore new avenues. Together, we will find innovative solutions, and I am confident in our ability to rise above this moment. Let's channel this energy into progress, proving that our commitment to excellence cannot be deterred. With unity and determination, we will achieve our goals.

Thank you.