

Ladies and gentlemen, esteemed colleagues, and tiny board member-to-be, Today, we gather here to celebrate something truly monumental--no, not the release of the latest office printer, but the upcoming arrival of our newest team addition. That's right, our beloved [Name] is about to embark on the most challenging project yet: Parent 101!

Let's all remember that diaper changing is not unlike drafting a quick email--it requires precision and speed. And just like our morning coffee runs, midnight feedings will soon become a routine mission.

As we shower [Name] with good wishes and adorable baby gear, let's also spare a thought for the unwritten spreadsheet of sleepless nights and the countless 'meetings' with their little one. We're all excited for the day when [Name] acs this, just like they do with every department presentation.

On behalf of the team, wishing you lots of love, laughter, and perhaps, a legendary "out of office" message.

Cheers to [Name] and the bundle of joy soon to join our ranks!