

Hey everyone,

Thanks for being here today to celebrate our new place. Moving in together has been quite the adventure already, and it makes me think of all the memories that led us to this point.

Remember those late-night study sessions at our old place, fueled by way too much coffee and whatever snacks we could find? We've come a long way since then, but those nights taught us the value of teamwork and laughter, even when deadlines loomed.

As we settle into our new home, I can't help but feel grateful for each one of you. We've shared so much already--and I look forward to all the new memories we'll create here. Here's to more laughter, more late-night talks, and the kind of friendships that make a house feel like a home.

Cheers to us and our next chapter together!