

Ladies and gentlemen, can I have your attention, please?

First of all, let me just say, if you don't enjoy this speech, the complaint box is located somewhere in the imaginary realm! Now, how good do we look tonight? I mean, I can barely recognize some of you without your work-from-home pajamas on.

Tonight, we're gathered to celebrate, mingle, and remind ourselves that we're all far better at laughing with each other than at synchronizing on Zoom. Aren't you glad you don't have to search for the unmute button to talk to someone here?

A special shoutout to the amazing team that made this evening possible. You're all like the superheroes of event planning. Only difference is, your capes are invisible, and I'm pretty sure you've got much better coffee, or something stronger, fueling you.

I hope everyone has a chance to catch up, share some laughs, and maybe even have a dance-off, because let's face it, in real life, there's no option to turn your video off if you accidentally do the worm!

So, here's to a night of good food, great company, and even better memories. Enjoy the evening, everyone, and remember: what happens at this reception, stays mostly off social media. Cheers!
