

To all who gather here today,
In this gentle, solemn way,
We remember a soul so dear,
Whose light and laughter linger near.
In memories woven like threads of gold,
Stories of a life both brave and bold,
Where kindness grew in every deed,
And friendship bloomed like the softest seed.
A heart that knew no bounds or end,
Our cherished, unforgettable friend.
Now in the stars, their spirit soars,
A guiding light forevermore.
Though tears may fall like whispered rain,
In our hearts, their warmth remains.
We'll carry forth their dreams and hopes,
As we learn to heal and cope.
So let us celebrate this life displayed,
In every moment, love conveyed.
For as long as hearts remember and share,
They live in the love that's everywhere.