

Certainly! Here's a simple example of a motivational speech for a seminar for a non-profit:

---

Good afternoon, everyone!

I am thrilled to be here with you today at this incredible gathering of dedicated individuals. Each of you is a beacon of hope and positivity in our community, and I want to start by acknowledging the amazing work that you do every single day.

Our mission, as a non-profit, is driven by passion and purpose. We are not just here to make a difference, but to inspire change that lasts. Every small action we take sends ripples through our communities. Whether it's helping a family in need, supporting education, or protecting our environment, each effort contributes to building a better future.

I know that the journey is not always easy. There are challenges and setbacks, but remember, it is during these times that our resolve is strengthened. Perseverance and dedication are the keys to overcoming any obstacle.

Together, we can achieve incredible things. Let's continue to support one another, share our stories, and lift each other up. Your commitment and hard work create the foundation for the change we envision.

Let us leave here today with renewed energy and a shared commitment to our cause. We are the catalysts of change, and with our collective efforts, we are unstoppable.

Thank you for your unwavering dedication. Let's make a difference, one step at a time!

Thank you.
