

Good evening, everyone!

Wow, look at all these little graduates! Can you believe it? They finally mastered the art of coloring inside the lines... well, mostly! Let's give them a round of applause!

Parents, you've worked hard too. You've navigated nap time negotiations and survived countless renditions of "Baby Shark." Your patience deserves a trophy--or at least a long nap!

To our amazing teachers, thank you for teaching the kids important life skills, like how to properly use glitter without covering every surface in the room. It's a superpower!

Kids, today you're graduating from kindergarten, which means you're officially playground pros and snack-time specialists. First grade will be full of new adventures, like learning to count way past ten and discovering that books have more than ten pages!

Remember, no matter where life takes you, keep sharing, keep caring, and always keep a stash of emergency cookies in your backpack.

Congratulations, little graduates! The world is your playground. Let's go out and have some fun! Thank you!
