

Hello everyone!

Wow, if walls could talk... well, they'd probably complain about how much louder we've all gotten over the years! But welcome back to our beloved school, the place where our most awkward years magically transformed us into the awkward adults you see today!

Let's just take a moment to realize--we've aged like a fine wine... or maybe more like a wine that was forgotten in the back of the fridge.

Either way, here we are, with a few more laughs, a lot more stories, and possibly some questionable hairstyles.

Looking around, I see some familiar faces. Yep, you all still look the same, minus the braces and plus a few distinguishing features that rhymes with 'miracle!' And for those who still fit into their old school uniforms, we salute your self-control and regret to inform you that the rest of us have snacks calling our name tonight.

This reunion is proof that our school could accomplish the impossible--I mean, how else can we explain us actually managing to coordinate schedules? Kudos to us!

As we reminisce about the good old days, let's remember the valuable lessons we learned here: like how caffeine could and still can be our best friend, and that sometimes you actually use algebra in real life... like figuring out how much you'll save with a discount on those mystery meatloaf school lunches in bulk.

So let's raise our glasses and toast to our adventures, our memories, and to appreciating the fact that dark circles under our eyes are now socially acceptable, thanks to the magic of adulthood.

Cheers to us--welcome back to the place where the beauty of youth was fortified against the backdrop of high school lunacy... and may we never have to take another pop quiz again!

Thank you, everyone, and let's enjoy the night!
