

Good evening, everyone!

Wow, what an honor it is to be up here accepting the Technology Innovation Award. I have to admit, when they first told me I won, I thought they were joking. After all, the last time I tried to upgrade my software, I accidentally set my computer to French. Let's just say, parlez-vous tech support?

But seriously, I'm truly humbled. This award means a lot to me and to our team who worked tirelessly--not just to innovate, but to make sure our technology doesn't just work, it doesn't crash right before a big presentation... like this one! And, of course, to make sure it doesn't become sentient and demand vacation days.

We've always believed that technology should improve lives--ideally without causing spontaneous hair loss. This journey hasn't been without its bumps. I remember telling our engineers, "Guys, we're not just thinking outside the box, we're redesigning the box into a circle... or maybe even a triangle if circles get too mainstream."

Thank you to the organizers, my amazing team who swears they actually enjoy my "let's-turn-this-upside-down" meetings, and to all of you who believe in pushing the digital envelope... or just trying not to end up in its spam folder.

Thank you, and let's keep making the future as exciting as a buffering-free life on Wi-Fi!

Cheers!
