

Ladies and gentlemen,

If I could have your attention, perhaps just for as long as it takes to solve one of those 5,000-piece puzzles that shows a detailed map of the cosmos--so really, just a moment.

Tonight, we gather not just for a meal, but for the verbal rounds of applause and intellectual swell of hearts. We're celebrating the union of two individuals who have eloquently solved the brain-teaser of love, and now stand on the brink of life's grander mysteries. Much like an algebraic equation, their compatibility seems to equal a beautiful solution.

To the parents who were the unsung architects of this love story, thank you for nurturing these two brilliant minds. Without you, we'd likely be gathered here discussing a very different set of variables.

And to our soon-to-be married couple, congratulations on finding the perfect proof that confirms, indeed, two is greater than one. Remember, marriage is a constant--unchanging despite the variables life throws your way--anchored by love, patience, and the occasional quote from Shakespeare.

So here's to the happy couple. May your life together be filled with laughter, love, and all the right answers. Cheers!
