

Hello everyone!

Welcome faculty, parents, and fellow students. Can you all believe we're finally here? The day when we transition from taking tests to realizing those tests actually pre-billed adult responsibilities!

First off, let's give a big hand to the teachers who survived not just one but possibly multiple versions of the chaotic movie that is the cafeteria during lunch breaks. That takes true courage.

To our parents--thank you for enduring the emotional rollercoaster of our high school years. You brought us here, and just think, in a few months, you might finally get your WiFi back!

Fellow students, today marks the end of an era: no more pop quizzes or searching stressful group chats for homework hints at 2 AM. Now, we'll just be Googling things like "How to do taxes" or "How to eat ramen for breakfast, lunch, and dinner".

As we head into the next chapter of our lives, let's take a moment to remember the valuable life skills we've learned. Like how a book report can sometimes include more page filler than actual analysis. Or that procrastination is just a fancy word for "I work best under pressure".

In conclusion, as we pack up our lockers and step out into the world, let's remember to stay true to ourselves, keep our laughter abundant, and maybe, just maybe, change the world--of reality TV, at least.

Congratulations to the graduating class of 2023. We did it!

Thank you!
