

My dear friends and family,

Today, we gather in the sacredness of this moment to witness a powerful transformation. It is a time of new beginnings, not just for those we ordain, but for all of us as a community of faith. This is a day that calls us to reflect on the profound journey of service and commitment. As we come together, let us remember that ordination is not merely a ceremony, but an invitation to transform the world through love and compassion. Those we ordain today step forward to lead with humility and grace, embodying the call to serve others selflessly.

Let us be inspired by their courage. Let their dedication ignite a fire within our hearts to pursue lives marked by kindness and integrity. May their example challenge us to deepen our own commitment to caring for our neighbors and nurturing our communities.

As we move forward, may the transformative power of love guide us continually. Let every act of service we undertake bring light into places of darkness and hope into hearts that long for peace.

In this sacred trust, our community grows stronger. Let us rejoice in this transformation, as we walk together in faith, today and always.
Amen.
