

Ladies and gentlemen, sisters and allies,

Today, we stand united, stronger and more resilient than ever before. We gather here not just to make our voices heard, but to remind the world of an undeniable truth: women's rights are human rights.

In every corner of the globe, women face challenges that demand our attention and action. Yet, in the face of adversity, we rise. We rise for equality, for justice, and for the fundamental rights that each woman deserves. We rise for our mothers, our daughters, our sisters, and ourselves.

This movement is not just about a single issue--it is about the recognition of our worth and the respect we are due as equal members of society. We are here to push boundaries, to break barriers, and to ensure that our daughters inherit a world where they are free to dream, to succeed, and to lead.

Our strength lies in our solidarity. Together, we can and will bring about change. Together, we can create a future where every woman thrives with dignity and respect.

Let us continue to stand strong, to speak out, and to build a world where everyone, regardless of gender, has the opportunity to flourish. Thank you.
