

Ladies and gentlemen,

We gather here today not just as citizens, but as compassionate human beings committed to justice, equality, and dignity for all. Our healthcare system is ailing--it is a patchwork that leaves too many out, and it is failing us where we are most vulnerable.

It is a moral imperative that we demand change. It is our duty to ensure that no person has to choose between food and life-saving medicine, between rent and a doctor's visit. This is not just about policy; it is about the lives of our friends, our families, and our neighbors. It is about the soul of our nation.

We must lift our voices for those who cannot afford to wait any longer. For the mother who sacrifices her health to care for her children; for the worker who forgoes treatment to keep the lights on; for every individual who has been denied the basic human right to healthcare.

Let us stand united in our call for comprehensive, accessible, and affordable healthcare for all. We will not rest until we have a system that reflects our highest values and our deepest empathy.

We demand change. We demand justice. We demand healthcare for all.

Thank you.
