

Ladies and gentlemen,

Thank you all for gathering here today to bid farewell to our beloved colleague, [Employee Name]. After [Number] years of dedicated service, [Employee Name] is finally trading in their office chair for a beach chair.

Now, we all know [Employee Name] has been dreaming of retirement from the moment they walked through those office doors. In fact, I believe their first words on their first day were, "How many days until retirement?" But who's counting, right?

[Employee Name], you've been the jack of all trades around here. You've been our go-to person for everything, and your ability to fix the printer with nothing more than a stern look borders on witchcraft.

We're going to miss your legendary holiday potlucks, where you boldly combined foods that should never share the same plate. And let's not forget your ability to make any meeting more interesting by slipping in entirely unrelated yet oddly captivating anecdotes.

As you set off on this new adventure, we just want you to know that we envy you. We all hope to follow in your well-worn flip-flop steps one day soon. Remember to send us postcards, or at least digital snaps of you doing absolutely nothing.

So, here's to retirement! May your days be filled with golf, your inbox be forever empty, and your afternoons endless. Cheers to you, [Employee Name], and may your future be as bright as your attempts at fixing the office Internet.

Congratulations and happy retirement!
