

Ladies and gentlemen,

As we gather here this evening, I am overwhelmed with a sense of nostalgia, seeing each one of you and recalling the days we spent together. It's incredible to think how years have flown by, yet the memories remain vivid in our hearts.

Back then, our days were filled with laughter, learning, and the forming of friendships that have stood the test of time. Do you remember those endless afternoons on the field, the stories shared over lunch, and the countless moments that seemed so ordinary but are now among our most cherished memories?

Tonight, let's celebrate not just the past, but also the bonds that have endured despite the years that have passed. We have all embarked on our journeys, but something has always drawn us back to one another.

Thank you for being here and for being a part of something so special.

Here's to rekindling old friendships, sharing new stories, and creating more memories together.

Cheers to us, and to the wonderful times we have shared and will continue to share.

Thank you.
