

Ladies and gentlemen, esteemed faculty, and my dear fellow classmates,
Today, we gather here to bid farewell to our senior students, who have been more than just our mentors--they have been our friends, guides, and an indispensable part of our school family.

As we stand on this threshold, memories come flooding back--those early days filled with excitement and nervousness, those late nights spent rehearsing for school plays, and those jubilant moments of victory on the sports field. Our seniors have always been there, showing us the way with their wisdom, kindness, and unwavering support.

You taught us how to navigate the complexities of school life and, more importantly, how to enjoy every moment of it. Your laughter and camaraderie created a welcoming atmosphere that we all cherished, and your spirit will continue to inspire those who follow in your footsteps. As you embark on your new journeys, remember that you take a piece of us with you. We wish you all the success and happiness in the world. May you always hold dear the memories and friendships forged within these walls. Thank you for everything, and good luck on your new adventure. Farewell, dear seniors, until we meet again.
