

Good evening, everyone,

I'm so delighted to see all of you here tonight. It feels like coming home, being surrounded by such wonderful friends and fellow believers. Our time together is always special, filled with warmth, laughter, and the kind of camaraderie that truly nourishes the soul.

As we gather here, let's take a moment to appreciate the connections we've built. Each of us brings something unique to this group--a smile, a story, a shared prayer--that strengthens the fabric of our community. It's in these friendships that we find encouragement, joy, and a sense of belonging.

Let us also remember to extend our hands to those who might be joining us for the first time. May they find the same welcome and grace that we've all experienced.

Tonight, let's enjoy each other's company, share our stories, and lift one another up in friendship and fellowship. Thank you all for being here and for the love and kindness you bring to our group.

God bless you all.