

Ladies and gentlemen,

I want to take this moment to say how truly special it is to be here with all of you today. As I look around, I see not just family, but a lifetime of memories captured in each smile and warm hug.

Growing up, we experienced a whirlwind of adventures together--running through the same backyard, sharing whispered secrets under blanket forts, and laughing until our stomachs ached. Those moments shaped us into who we are today and created bonds that time can never break.

It's funny how life takes us in different directions. We've built our own families, chased careers, and created homes in places far and wide. Yet, no matter where life has taken us, this bond has remained steadfast, pulling us back here together.

We reminisce about the good old days and remember where we came from.

Each of those memories is a thread in the fabric of our story, weaving a legacy of love and laughter for the generations to come.

So here's to us--siblings in life's grand adventure. May we always cherish this connection, hold these memories close, and look forward to creating many more together.

Cheers!
