

Certainly! Here's a simple example of a resignation speech in a collaborative-spirit tone:

Good [morning/afternoon/evening], everyone,
I hope this message finds you well. I am here today to share with you a personal decision that has been a difficult one to make. After much consideration, I have decided to resign from my position at [Nonprofit Name], effective [last working day, typically two weeks from announcement].

This decision was not made lightly, as my time here has been incredibly meaningful. Working alongside such dedicated, passionate individuals has been a truly inspiring experience. I have learned and grown so much in the company of people who are so committed to making a difference.

I am tremendously grateful for the opportunity to have been a part of our collective mission and for the support I have received from each of you. The collaboration and team spirit at [Nonprofit Name] have always been our greatest strength, and I have no doubt that this will continue to drive the organization forward.

While I may be leaving my role, I remain committed to the cause that unites us. I look forward to supporting [Nonprofit Name] in new ways as I transition to the next chapter of my career. Please feel free to reach out at any time; I am excited to find new ways to collaborate in the future.

Thank you for the incredible journey. I am confident that the work we've started will continue to flourish, thanks to all of you.

Wishing you all the best,
[Your Name]
