

Ladies and gentlemen,

I stand before you today, not just as a survivor, but as a testament to the incredible journey of recovery. Just a short while ago, I was battling the chains of addiction, feeling lost and powerless. But through determination and support, I found my way back to myself.

Recovery is not a destination; it is a journey. Along this path, I have learned that every small step forward is a victory. Every day that I chose to stay strong was another day I reclaimed my life.

I realized the importance of surrounding myself with supporters--people who believed in me when I couldn't believe in myself. Together, we rewrote the story of my life, one filled with healing, hope, and resilience.

Today, I want to encourage each of you to embrace your journey with courage. Know that setbacks do not define you; how you rise from them does. Remember, you are not alone in this battle.

Let us walk this road together, hand in hand, as we build a new tomorrow filled with hope, strength, and unwavering determination.

Thank you.
