

Esteemed Members of the Committee,

I am here today not to deflect blame but to address the concerns around my recent work, which has been flagged for plagiarism. I fully acknowledge the seriousness of these accusations and wish to express my sincere regret for any oversight on my part.

My intention has always been to contribute originally to our academic discourse. However, in retrospect, I recognize that pressures and improper citation practices may have resulted in content being perceived as plagiarized. For this, I am truly sorry.

This experience has highlighted significant areas for personal growth and improvement in my academic practices. I am committed to undergoing training in proper citation and attribution methods to prevent future occurrences. Furthermore, I intend to consult regularly with mentors or advisors to ensure my work consistently meets integrity standards.

I am here to seek understanding and the opportunity for redemption through constructive measures. I pledge to transform this incident into a pivotal moment of learning and improvement.

Thank you for your consideration.

Respectfully,

[Your Name]
