

Good morning, everyone. Thank you for being here today. I am excited to present our project, which addresses the pressing issue of food waste in urban areas.

The problem we have identified is significant: approximately 30% of food produced in cities goes to waste. This not only has negative environmental impacts but also undermines food security.

Our solution is straightforward and effective. We have developed a mobile application called "FoodSaver," which connects local retailers, restaurants, and consumers to redistribute surplus food. Retailers can list excess food, and consumers can purchase it at a discounted rate. Over the past three months, our pilot program has successfully reduced food waste by 20% in our test area while providing affordable food options.

In conclusion, "FoodSaver" not only tackles food waste but also supports people in need. We are confident that, with further development, our solution can make a substantial difference across many more cities. Thank you.
