

Ladies and gentlemen, may I have your attention, please?

This is your captain speaking, and I have some news that might make you reconsider getting too comfortable in those airport seats. It seems our flight has hit a bit of a time delay... unfortunately, not the fast-moving kind. But on the bright side, it's giving us all a chance to appreciate the finer things in airport life--like overpriced sandwiches and how many ways you can creatively use a neck pillow.

Yes, we're running a tad late, but think of it as an opportunity to bond with your fellow travelers, swap stories, or finally finish the book you started two vacations ago.

Thank you for your patience and good humor. We'll have you in the air faster than you can spell "in-flight WiFi."