

Ladies and gentlemen,

Good evening! Today, I'm going to clarify a few common English idioms to help everyone understand them better.

First, let's talk about "raining cats and dogs." This doesn't mean animals are falling from the sky. It simply means it's raining very heavily.

Next, consider the phrase "break the ice." This idiom is used when you want to start a conversation in a social setting to make everyone feel more comfortable.

Another popular idiom is "the ball is in your court." This means that it's your turn to make a decision or take action.

Lastly, let's discuss "hit the nail on the head." When someone says this, they mean you have described exactly what is causing a situation or problem.

Understanding these idioms can help improve your communication skills, making you more relatable and engaging in your conversations. Thank you for your attention!
