

Ladies and gentlemen, thank you for being here today. I've noticed that there are a few common misconceptions about our course, and I want to take a moment to clarify these.

First, some of you think that you need prior experience in this subject to succeed. This isn't true. Our course is designed for beginners, and we'll cover all the foundational elements you need to understand the material.

Another misconception is that the course workload is overwhelming. While it's true that this course requires commitment and effort, remember that we have resources in place to support you. Our study groups, office hours, and online materials are there to help you manage your time and assignments effectively.

Finally, there's a belief that grades are based solely on exams. In reality, we consider a range of evaluations, including class participation, projects, and quizzes, to give you a well-rounded assessment.

I hope this clears up any confusion, and I encourage you to reach out if you have more questions. Together, we'll make this a successful learning experience. Thank you.
