

Certainly! Here's a simple example of a speech for clarification during an academic conference discussion:

---

"Thank you for your insightful presentation. I would like to seek clarification on a particular point you mentioned regarding the methodology of your study. Specifically, could you elaborate on the criteria used for selecting the sample population? Understanding this in more detail would greatly help in comprehending the applicability of your findings. Thank you."

---

This example demonstrates how to politely ask for additional information during a conference.