

Certainly! Here's a simple example for a clarification speech at an online conference:

Good afternoon, everyone,

I hope you are all enjoying today's sessions as much as I am. I wanted to take a moment to address and clarify a couple of points from my presentation earlier today, as I've received some questions in the chat. Firstly, regarding the implementation timeline for our new software, I initially mentioned that we aim to launch in the second quarter of next year. To clarify, this target is contingent upon the completion of our beta testing phase. We expect this phase to reveal any potential adjustments needed, and if all goes well, we'll adhere to the outlined schedule.

Secondly, there was some confusion about the integration capabilities of our system with existing tools. I want to clearly state that our system is designed to seamlessly integrate with all major platforms currently used in the industry, including CRM and ERP systems. This compatibility will streamline your workflow without needing to replace existing tools. Thank you for bringing these questions to my attention. It's important to me that all aspects of the presentation are clear, so please feel free to reach out if you have any more questions or require further explanation. Thank you for your time, and I hope you enjoy the rest of the conference!
