Certainly! Here's a simple example of a speech for clarification during remote client consultation:

"Hello [Client's Name],

Thank you for taking the time to meet with us today. I want to ensure that we're both on the same page regarding your goals and our proposed solutions. Just to clarify, you've mentioned that your primary objective is to improve your website's user experience. Is that correct?

Based on our discussion, it seems like the main areas of focus will be enhancing the site's mobile responsiveness and simplifying the navigation. Does that align with your expectations?

Great! To move forward, we'll be conducting a thorough website audit to identify specific areas for improvement. We'll send you a detailed report by the end of next week, along with our recommendations.

Please let me know if there are any other specific features or concerns you'd like us to address. Your feedback is crucial to ensuring we deliver the best possible results.

Thank you again for your time, and I'm looking forward to our next meeting."

Feel free to adjust the details to better fit your particular situation with the client.
