

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Thank you for gathering here today. The purpose of our discussion is to clarify the risk management strategies we have in place and ensure everyone understands their role in mitigating potential risks.

Firstly, it's crucial to recognize that while risks can never be entirely eliminated, they can be managed effectively with careful planning and execution. Our goal is to minimize these risks to a level where they no longer pose a significant threat to our objectives.

To achieve this, we must remain vigilant and proactive. This means consistently monitoring our operations and promptly addressing any issues that arise. Communication is key; please ensure that any concerns or anomalies are reported as soon as possible.

It's also important to regularly review and update our risk management policies. Situations and external factors can change quickly, requiring us to adapt to new challenges with agility.

Remember, risk management is a shared responsibility. By working together and adhering to our guidelines, we contribute not only to the safety of our operations but also to our continued success. Let's proceed with caution and maintain our commitment to these principles.

Thank you.
