

Ladies and gentlemen, esteemed faculty, proud parents, and of course, the graduating class of [Year]--congratulations!

Today, we gather not only to celebrate our achievements but to bask in the sweet relief of deadlines permanently checked off our to-do lists. They say education is the key to success, though I think we all agree it's also the key to a lifetime supply of instant noodles and creative ways to caffeinate.

Now, as we stand on the brink of adulthood, it's time to answer burning questions like, "What's next?" and "How do I adult?" Spoiler alert: Nobody knows. We're all just winging it, some while wearing a cap and gown.

Some of us have dreams of changing the world, while others simply dream of changing out of our pajamas before 3 PM. Both are noble goals.

Remember, life is a journey, not a race. And if you're anything like me, your inner GPS may be stuck recalculating from time to time.

As we go forth, let's carry the lessons we've learned: the friendships forged, the wisdom gained, and maybe a couple of textbooks we forgot to return. You never know when you'll need an emergency doorstop.

So, let's raise a metaphorical glass to the memories we've made and the tomorrows we'll conquer. Here's to us, the class of [Year]--may our Wi-Fi always be strong, our job searches be short, and our student loans be... someone else's problem.

Thank you, congratulations, and remember to turn the tassel before you make an exit!
