

Ladies and gentlemen,

Well, here we are--gathered today to say goodbye to [Name], who for some reason has decided to leave us. I can't help but wonder if it's something we said or didn't say. Perhaps we exhausted their supply of coffee or drained their patience reserves. Either way, [Name], we'll try not to take it personally.

We're truly going to miss their contributions to the team--like never refilling the paper in the printer or leaving the office with insightful gems such as, "Is it Friday yet?" and "Donuts are not just for Fridays." These are life lessons that will resonate with us forever.

[Name], we know you're off to bigger and better things--like maybe finally figuring out how to fold a fitted sheet or actually reading the terms and conditions before clicking 'Agree.' Remember, we'll still be here, cheering you on, from a safe distance, of course.

On behalf of everyone here, we wish you the best of luck and much success. Just don't forget us when you make it big--because we know behind every great person is an exceptional team they left behind. Here's to your new adventures! May your WiFi be strong, your emails concise, and your coffee always hot.

Thank you, everyone!
