

Certainly! Here's a simple example of a speech for a nursing job interview focused on a patient-first tone:

---

"Thank you for the opportunity to interview today. I am passionate about nursing because I truly believe in the importance of putting patients first. My approach to nursing is centered around empathy, active listening, and patient advocacy.

In my previous role, I consistently prioritized patient needs by ensuring they felt heard and comfortable. I believe that every patient interaction is an opportunity to make a positive impact on their health journey.

I am committed to delivering compassionate care, maintaining open communication with patients and their families, and continuously improving my skills to provide the best possible patient outcomes. I am excited about the possibility of joining your team and contributing to a healthcare environment where patients come first."

---

This speech highlights key qualities like empathy, communication, and commitment to patient care.