

Sure! Here's an example of a motivational speech for a performance review:

---

Good afternoon, everyone.

First, I'd like to thank each of you for your hard work and dedication over the past year. It's been inspiring to see how much we've accomplished as a team.

Today, I want to focus on three key areas: your achievements, areas for growth, and our vision for the future.

Let's start with the achievements. You've all gone above and beyond in your roles. Whether it was meeting challenging deadlines, creatively solving problems, or collaborating across departments, your efforts have not gone unnoticed. These accomplishments are the foundation of our success.

Now, let's talk about growth. Each of us has the potential to reach even greater heights. Consider this an opportunity to focus on skills you'd like to develop further. Maybe it's taking on a leadership role in a new project, enhancing your communication skills, or diving deeper into data analytics. Whatever it is, I'm here to support your journey.

Finally, let's look toward the future. Our vision is ambitious, but I have no doubt that with your passion and commitment, we can achieve it. Let's focus on fostering innovation, embracing change, and driving forward with enthusiasm.

Together, we can continue to build a workplace where everyone thrives.

Thank you for being an essential part of our journey. I'm excited to see what we'll accomplish together in the coming year.

Keep up the great work!

I hope this helps inspire a positive and forward-looking performance review!
