

Ladies and gentlemen,

Today, I stand before you to speak on reconciliation--an important journey of healing and unity. This conversation might not be easy, but it's necessary.

In our community, we have faced misunderstandings and disagreements. It's time to address them with honesty. True reconciliation begins with recognizing the challenges we share and genuinely listening to one another.

At times, we all fall short. I acknowledge the moments when I've not fully understood others' experiences. But reconciliation provides an opportunity to learn and grow together.

As we move forward, let's commit to open dialogue and mutual respect. Let's celebrate our differences and build a future where everyone feels valued and heard.

Together, we can create a more inclusive community, one step at a time. Thank you.