

Ladies and gentlemen,

If I could have your attention for just a moment, I want to start by giving a big, hearty thank you to everyone who has gathered here today--it's not every day you manage to keep a surprise from the two liveliest detectives in town!

Mom and Dad, we're here celebrating you and the incredible duo you make. You've shown us that true love is figuring out the microwave together, parenting is pretending not to hear us sneaking in, and that family is about finding someone who stands by your side, even when you're completely wrong about where you left the car keys.

As much as you've tried to convince us that you were once cool--and a few of those old pictures do give us hope--your true gift isn't in being cool, but in being kind, supportive, and loving to everyone around you.

So here's to more adventures together! May your days be filled with laughter, and may your secret dessert stash always remain a secret.

We love you to the end of the universe and back. Cheers!
